

Transform your playground with a Traversing Wall

We are finding that many schools are interested in developing their playground walls to add a new dimension to physical activity for their pupils and add visual interest to their playgrounds. Especially where outside space is at a premium.

Gail Astbury is a leading provider of art-based traversing walls to schools and parks, and her work has been covered in the national media.

Her work provides an alternative to more traditional playground sports like football. The activity of traversing a wall encourages arm strength, poise and balance, as well as the ability to think ahead and take responsibility for one's own security.

All her installations meet the current Health & Safety standards for school play equipment, observing height recommendations and using the very best professionally cast resin hand and foot-holds and fixings.

Traversing wall projects can involve the whole school – children, parents and teachers – utilising their ideas, designs and creating ceramics, and mosaics. The finished result brings benefits to the school both physically and visually.
